

Taste of Other Places (August 2014)

Prologue: What a shame there's such a mess in my photos. It would take more time than I can spare now that the two little guys are around to treat this topic to its fullest. Anyway ☺

I've travelled quite a lot.
Can we get enough? Not.

Got

Very much to share
If you feel like, dare

Ask me in the comments
As each verse below ends

In a place
I did face.

The Moon high above observes
Places I've been, people I met.

That far weird country store serves
Snakes in bottles, not the Glenlivet

Mountain cottage full of memories
Falling apart through the old years

The mountains, feeling aloft
An evening touch felt so soft

A mermaid from the lake
Rocks
Flesh and bones, no fake
Shocks

Totems in the dale witnessed contact.
What is left today? Not much, in fact.

A snapshot taken on the bridge.
Where're we now? Out of reach.

The waterfall's foam freezes on the branches.
How far? Now an ocean, then just few inches.

Eyes closed, midday solar furnace,
His words do inquire: "Quo vadis?"

It's been fantastic, grand a roam,
Still, there is no place like home.

Epilogue:

The Moon high above observes
Places I've been, people I met.
